ANOTATED REFERENCE LIST

An Annotated Reference List is a collection of citations that includes explanatory information for each work cited. Perform secondary research on one of the following topics and compile an Annotated Reference List containing at least 20 entries for sources that you think would be helpful in writing a term paper on the topic:

- Sigmund Freud and the Origins of Psychoanalysis
- General J.E.B. Stuart’s Role in the Battle of Gettysburg
- Atlas Shrugged and the Objectivist Philosophy of Ayn Rand
- Stem Cell Research and the Primacy of Life
- The Evolution of Twentieth Century Skyscraper Construction Techniques
- Mandatory Sentencing and the Role of the Judge
- Louis Pasteur and the Germ Theory of Disease
- Fat Man and Little Boy: The Origins of the Manhattan Project
- Sylvia Beach and the Lost Generation

You can use any print or digital resources you want for your research, but the sources you choose must be authoritative and appropriate to your subject. Your list should not include Wikipedia or other unscholarly sources, such as TV network websites and student papers. In addition, the entries in your Annotated List must include at least two books, at least two articles from databases, and at least two Internet resources.

You must format your Annotated List properly, using the correct APA style for each type of source. Consult the “APA Style” section of the Appendix in Technical Communication.

To provide the annotation in your list, add a sentence or two to the end of each entry, specifying why you think it is a reliable and appropriate source for your chosen topic, as in the following example:

Knowlson, James (1996). Damned to fame: The life of Samuel Beckett. New York, NY: Simon and Schuster. This is the definitive full-length biography of Beckett, the only one written with his approval and his cooperation.
